This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

Mr. Whitcomb, from the committee on Soldiers Home, presented the following report:

REPORT OF THE ITINERARY OF THE ASSEMBLY SOLDIERS' HOME COMMITTEE

To the Assembly of the State of New York:

Legislative Session of 1922.

Pursuant to the precedent long since established, but not carried into operation since 1917, your committee on Soldiers' Home performed its functions in part by making it a itinerary of investigation and inspection of the Soldiers homes of this State, and, so far as is known, for the first time in the history of this House, respectfully submits its findings and recommendations.

Your committee left Albany the evening of February 8, 1922, arriving at Oxford, February 9th, there being received by members of the board of managers of the Oxford House and by them conducted on a tour of inspection. Less than two hundred persons are now living in this institution, more than one-half of whom are helpless and in the hospital or under medical attendance in their rooms. The average of these people is about 80 years. In former years, the sick and feeble were cared for to some extent by those who physically could do so, but with the advance of years all care of the sick and helpless must be done by hired employees.

A shortage of help in the matter of attendants has made it necessary for the doctor and trained nurses to assume no small part of the menial labor. Your committee believes that this condition is not in accord with the interest of this institution or the people who make this place their home, and recommends that sufficient appropriation be made whereby competent and sufficient help may be secured. The exquisite neatness, order and care given the institution and the people whose home is there reflects great credit upon the Commandant, Col. Graham, the doctor in charge, with her corps of nurses, her small force of attendants and the board of managers.

On February 10th your committee arrived at Bath Home and were there received by the very efficient commandant, Col. Tillison and the board of managers of which a former speaker of this House, Dr. Bush is president, and a former floor leader, Hon. Jas. T. Rogers is vice-president. After luncheon a careful inspection of this home was made in detail. As a result of such inspection, your committee reports as follows: Electric wiring is in a very unsafe condition and obsolete, a menace to both lives and property. Plumbing in an unsanitary condition, due largely to escaping gases probably resulting from obsolete or worn-out plumbing. Sewerage disposal conditions have been condemned by the State Board of Health and your committee recommended that in particular the matters of electric wiring, plumbing and sewerage disposal be remedied without unnecessary delay, and since our visit we are pleased to report that an appropriation has been made to remedy this condition.

Of approximately 500 men making this place their home, approximately one-half are in the hospital or under direct medical attention. The average age of these men is 80 years, and due to diseases to which men of their age are highly susceptible. Your committee recommends the hospital and surgical conditions be placed in the highest degree of efficiency as to surgical and operative equipment, in fact repairs of equipment and operating room in their entirety be brought to modern standard efficiency.

We most highly recommend the efficiency of the attending physicians, in particular Dr. Hill and his assistants, whose kindness, courtesy and ability are of the highest type. Under the supervision of Col. J. F. Tillison, Commandant, whose life experience as an officer of the regulary army of the United States, the discipline, order and methods are ideal and working in harmony with him is a wide-awake and conscientious board of managers, which places the veterans and property of this State in very capable hands.

All of which is hereby respectfully submitted.

F. E. WHITCOMB,
E. E. COLE,
WEBB A. JOINER,
G. L. LEWIS,
CHAS C. SACKETT,
CHARLES L. BANKS,
JAMES N. LOWN,
RICHARD J. TONRY.

Ordered, That the Clerk return said bill to the Senate, with a message that the Assembly have concurred in the passage of the same.

A message from the Governor was received and read, in the words following:

STATE OF NEW YORK — EXECUTIVE CHAMBER,
March 7, 1922.

To the Assembly:

I return herewith without my approval Assembly bill (Int. No. 276, Printed No. 435) entitled "An act to amend chapter three hundred and ninety of the Laws of nineteen hundred and seven, entitled 'An act to make the office of the county clerk of Schenectady county a salaried office, and regulating the management of said office,'" in relation to the salaries of deputy clerks and other assistants in such office."

Not approved:

This bill authorizes the county clerk of Schenectady county to appoint specified employees and fixes their minimum salaries. This is plainly a matter for the board of supervisors who necessarily must know more about local conditions and the needs of the office than it is possible for the Legislature to know. The reason assigned for the passage of the bill was the action of the board of supervisors in reducing the number of employees below the number claimed to be necessary to handle the business of the office efficiently.

If the board of supervisors have acted improperly, and have been actuated by political motives, as seems to be indicated, the remedy is in the hands of the electorate. It is better to suffer temporary ills than to violate sound principles of government and if we are to have responsible local government, the State must not interfere in the decision of questions which can best be decided by the local authorities.

(Signed) NATHAN L. MILLER.

On motion of Mr. C. T. Male, said message, together with said bill, was ordered laid upon the table.

The Senate sent for concurrence a resolution, in the words following:

Ordered, That the Clerk return said bill to the Senate, with a message that the Assembly have concurred in the passage of the same with amendments.

Hon. James W. Wadsworth, Jr., United States Senator, appeared in the Assembly chamber.

The Speaker: I am sure this is indeed a real pleasure. I was just talking with Senator Wadsworth, and he said he had come to make his annual talk to his old friends in this House. I know how much at home he feels here, because he tells me that every time he sees me. He needs no further introduction and I am sure we are going to listen to a few remarks that will not only be entertaining but instructive to all of us. Senator Wadsworth.

Senator Wadsworth: Mr. Speaker, and Gentlemen of the Assembly, your Presiding Officer did not tell you all that I said. It is a delight to me to be able to come here and renew acquaintance, amid well beloved scenes, with my good friends. But I remarked to him that this matter of being invited to the rostrum to say a word must by this time have become an annual infliction upon the Assembly. He did not tell that part of it.

Of course, one of the things that always strikes me with the greatest emphasis, as soon as I arrive here, is to see a certain portrait that hangs in the Speaker's Room. I always wonder if he ever looked like that.

I understand, Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen, that you are to beat your record in the matter of early adjournment, and in that I am exceedingly envious of you. I have spent six summers in Washington, and it looks as if I were going to spend a seventh. It certainly is a matter of note and congratulation that the Assembly finishes its work and leaves Albany before the ice goes out of the river. It indicates, at least, a promptness and efficiency in the work of a legislative body, as large and as important as this, which ought to receive the approval of all friends of legislative government.

I do not know that I am expected upon an occasion of this sort to refer to things of very serious import, and yet, perhaps, you will bear with me just a moment if I lay a thought or two before you, thoughts which have been in my mind pretty seriously for some time, and are especially so now. I learned enough of the government of the State of New York during the six years I spent in Albany to believe it was an efficient government, and that it was close to the people; that year in and year out it was responsive. It is now responsive to the wishes, the genuine sane wishes, of the people of the State of New York, and I make this observation not as a partisan.

It is true that the Legislature of the State of New York and its government generally, regardless of the Party in power, has been responsive and prompt to meet the wishes of the people of this State. I have always believed that the government that is close to the people is the best government to deal with the intimate affairs of the people, and is the most efficient government.

My confidence in the government of this great State is so great that I view with regret tendencies at Washington which will lead toward a sapping away of the powers and prerogatives of this State government. I think none of us can deny that such tendency exists today and has been existing for some time. In fact, the tendency seems to be growing, although I derive some encouragement from certain protests which have been made locally in recent months. There is a colloquial phrase which runs "Let George do it." Too many people to-day, in my humble judgment, are saying "Let the Federal Government do it."

Many a community, entirely able to solve its own local problems, is too prone to invite the Federal Government to come in and do the work for them. The inevitable result will be the slow but sure breaking down of State Governments and their powers and prerogatives, and taking away from the citizens, men and women of the United States, that sense of responsibility, local responsibility if you please, without which no great people can successfully govern themselves for any length of time.

I suppose I have voted in the negative a good many times in Washington on propositions which, under the guise of Federal aid to be extended to the States for the carrying on of certain projects, are really designed to take away from the States authority over those projects. They ultimately do take it away, for it goes without contradiction, I think, that when the Federal Government extends Federal aid to States in the carrying on of projects eventually the Federal Government must lay down the conditions, and the rules, and the regulations under which the Federal money is spent. And I have faith enough in the people of New York and in their government to believe that this State will be better governed if it takes care of its own affairs and if the hands of the Federal Government are kept off.

That is rather old-fashioned doctrine, Mr. Speaker. Sometimes I have been accused of being an old-fashioned Democrat when I have said those things. But the tendency to-day has not been evidenced in the platform of either of the great political parties. Neither the Republican National nor the Democratic National organization have adopted these new policies as a part of their faith. It would seem, rather, that men of all parties or many men of all parties, are drifting in that direction.

It involves, Mr. Speaker, as you well know, and as the Members of this Asssembly know, another exceedingly important problem, and that is the problem of taxation.

We are in a difficult predicament in the matter of taxation to-day, and not all of it is due to the great War and the expenditures which we were compelled to make during the War. A good deal of it is due to this very tendency I have mentioned. The vice of it, as I look at it, is that no matter how efficiently it may be run the Federal Government can never be as close to the people, in their intimate affairs, as the government of a State; and the citizen of the United States can never comprehend and understand the Federal Government in all its vast complications and ramifications as he can comprehend and understand the government of his State.

So, if we are to remain a people in effective control of these matters which affect us in our homes, in our families, and in our daily life, conceding of course to the Federal Government those constitutional powers which are necessary for the binding and holding together of this great Nation, and provide for its National defense, its National commerce, its National currency, and things which are essentially National — if we are to govern ourselves, it were wise for us to remember that self-government can only be successful in the long run under a Federal system in which the local responsibility is left in the hands of the people, locally.

I may be addressing some gentlemen who do not agree with me on this proposition, but I can not help believing, Mr. Speaker, as I utter these observations, that the Legislature of the State of New York is competent to run the legislative affairs of this State and is the guardian of the interests of the people of New York in their local concerns. It has always been competent; it is competent to-day, and I believe it will be competent, always.

The Congress has immense tasks of a purely National character and in relation to foreign affairs so great that it now has to sit each year nearly ten months out of the year in order to do the National business.

The Legislature of a State such as New York has immense tasks of local concern. Let each stay within its field, its proper field, and the whole country will be more happy, more contented, and our Government will be more responsible, and its honor will be maintained against every danger and menace.

After all is said and done, the worst enemies of self-government arise from within, and the best defense is that sense of responsibility which the citizen has in doing the job right in his own locality.

My friends, I congratulate you on the record you are making. As I say, you make us envious in Washington when we hear that the great New York Legislature is to adjourn on March 17th. We wish we could have done our work that soon. Of course, it has been impossible. I have no doubt each and every one of you will go back to your constituents with a just pride in the record this House has made this year, and with the determination to carry on the Government of New York in accordance with the high standard of the past. You have my best wishes.

By Mr. Katlin:

Whereas, It is the intention of the Federal government as part of the disarmament program agreed to by the various nations of the world at the recent Washington conference, to dismantle or otherwise discontinue the use of various navy yards throughout the country which are used for the purpose of constructing and repairing ships of war.

Whereas, The navy yard at Brooklyn is one of the best equipped plants in the country for the purpose of original construction, as well as repair.

A message from the Governor, by the hand of his Secretary, was received and read, in the words following:

STATE OF NEW YORK — EXECUTIVE CHAMBER,
ALBANY, August 28, 1922.

To the Legislature:

Industrial disputes, impairing transportation and suspending the production of both anthracite and bituminous coal, recently threatened the paralysis of industry and now threaten widespread distress next winter from a shortage of domestic fuel.

A few have set their wills above the public will, their selfish purposes above the interest of all. Winter approaches, a coal famine stares the people in the face threatening acute distress among those least able to provide for themselves, but the dispute goes on.

The disputants are too intent on carrying their points to consider the public welfare which it is the high function of government to promote.

A nation wide industrial dispute involving essential industries verges on revolution and in fact is the method advocated by those who plot revolution, of whom there are still unfortunately too many in this country. Such a dispute irrespective of its merits is revolutionary, because it subordinates the general interest to the selfish interests of a few. It is subversive of free government because it subjects all the people to the tyranny of a few and a government established to promote the general welfare cannot tolerate the tyranny of any interest, group or individual and endure. When the health, happiness and welfare of all the people are placed in jeopardy, no matter how, the government to whom alone the public can look at such a time must intervene, not alone to safeguard the public health and general welfare at the moment, but, if it is to accomplish its high purpose, to prevent a recurrence of similar jeopardy. The time for such intervention has now arrived.

Emergencies may require the exercise by the government of unusual powers, even limiting the freedom of individual action, but individual interest is subordinate to the general interest which must be supreme at all times. The individual has to surrender some liberty of action to preserve any. The extent of the public need is the measure of the surrender required and of that the Legislative authority, in the first instance at least, is the judge. I have, therefore, convened the Extraordinary Session to ask consideration of the measures which the State of New York may take to protect the public health and promote the general welfare in the present emergency.

Happily the resumption of mining in the bituminous fields has averted the threatened national calamity from the suspension of industry. The shortage of bituminous coal promises to be speedily relieved if the railroads are able to transport it. The menace at the moment arises from the shortage of anthracite coal. There are no stocks of anthracite anywhere and surveys so far made indicate that there is less than the usual amount in the hands of consumers. Five months of production have already been lost and cannot be made up, as, unlike the bituminous situation, the capacity of the anthracite mines is but little above the consumption of the country mostly during the winter months. The summer is the time for the accumulation of supplies for the winter. The summer production has been lost and the resumption of mining is not yet in sight. If production were resumed tomorrow the situation would probably be aggravated by the impairment of railroad equipment which will soon be taxed to move the crops. Whatever happens, there is bound to be a shortage of domestic fuel and every day's delay in the resumption of mining now adds in increasing ratio to the menace. There is bound to be such a shortage as to require rationing to insure every one a fair share of what there may be. Hoarding and gouging always attendant upon a shortage must be prevented. In any case unless the State intervenes those who can pay most will be served first, whereas the least able must be our first concern for they are totally unprepared to cope with a fuel shortage. We must practice rigid economy. That may have to be enforced. Those who have anthracite coal should save it all for severe weather. It will be easier to use substitutes now and during the cold snaps of fall and early winter than after cold weather sets in. Oil, gas and electricity should be substituted for anthracite whenever possible and people should equip themselves with the facilities to use them. Wood will have to be used by those who can procure it and it is well to lay in a stock now. There promises to be enough bituminous coal if it can be transported to care for the needs of industry and the public utilities and we must learn how to use it for domestic fuel. Hydro-electric energy may have to be diverted from industrial to household uses. Light, heat and power, however produced, may have to be regulated and their use possibly curtailed for some purposes. In a word, the State must intervene or leave the public to shift for themselves in a situation which has got beyond the operation of economic law or the power of individual action. The State must intervene in an emergency or confess that, except under normal conditions, it has not the power, the capacity or the energy to serve the high purpose of its creation, i. e., the promotion of the general welfare.

The foregoing suggestions relate only to palliatives,—to measures for relief, not cure, but the State of New York has no coal to mine. It can neither start production now or take measures to prevent a general suspension of production in the future. We cannot even insure the receipt of our fair share of coal when mining is resumed though we must be prepared to do our best to get our share. I trust that when mining is resumed, the States will not have to compete for their fair share of coal with the inevitable inflation of prices and derangement of distribution consequent upon such competition at a time of an acute shortage, but it is beyond the power of this State to prevent that. If we do all we can we shall have the satisfaction at least of doing our best whatever happens and we can do much to prevent hardship and relieve distress even if the worst should happen.

Briefly, I recommend the creation of a single headed fuel administration with adequate power to supervise, regulate and control the distribution, use, sale and price of all fuel, and the creation of a revolving fund of at least ten million dollars for the use of the administrator to finance any operations that may be required and to buy and sell fuel if necessary. Such operations should be conducted without loss to the treasury which is fortunately in a condition to advance that amount or any additional sum that may be required. That sum should be ample, however, to provide all the financing required at a given time.

I think it would be a grave mistake to attempt to substitute new for existing agencies of distribution, and I trust that supervision only will be required. But it is better not to interfere at all than to attempt interference without adequate power and energy, the possession of which may in fact make it possible to exercise a minimum of unusual powers.

Perhaps the most doubtful powers suggested are those to buy and sell fuel and to fix prices or margins of profit. Such powers are not suited to normal times and conditions, but we are dealing with an emergency. I do not intend any reflection upon either producers or distributors, but the public cannot be left to the mercy of any class, group, or individual however good their motives. Price fixing is contrary to all economic laws, but economic laws do not operate in an emergency such as we are dealing with. I am not unmindful of the objections to grants of extraordinary power by the Legislature. The exercise of such powers begets the habit and accustoms the people to dangerous innovations. Such powers will rarely in the first instance be granted except for a good purpose, but once exercised in time of emergency, they set the example and furnish the excuse for the demagogue to incite popular clamor for their continued exercise when there is no emergency and no occasion for them. It is often better to suffer temporary ills than to employ remedies which may do permanent harm. However, the government should not in an emergency be left impotent to protect the very lives of the people for fear of setting a precedent which may be abused. Our reluctance to grant extraordinary powers should yield, precisely as constitutional limitations upon the exercise of such power yield, to compelling public necessity. I do not contemplate putting the State in the coal business. What I propose is that the agency created by us shall have power enough to make it unnecessary for the State to go into the coal business.

The decisions of the Court of Appeals and of the United States Supreme Court in the so-called rent or housing cases appear to remove any doubt of the constitutional validity of the legislation proposed; (People v. La Fetra, 230 N. Y. 429; Levy v. Siegel, 230 N. Y. 634; Block v. Hirsh, 256 U. S. 135; Brown Co. v. Feldman, 256 U. S. 170).

Those cases involved both the fifth and the fourteenth amendments of the Federal Constitution and similar provisions of the State Constitution to which the exercise of the police power to protect the public health and promote the general welfare was held to be superior. The present emergency directly involves the public health and the general welfare. The temporary interruption of transportation due to terminal conditions in New York harbor has on two occasions within recent years created conditions from lack of fuel in the tenement districts of New York, which no one can calmly contemplate having repeated on a larger scale. The courts have held that government is not impotent in such an emergency and it is for us who are charged with responsibility to demonstrate its capacity to protect its citizens.

I am submitting to you the single question of how to deal with the impending emergency due to a shortage of fuel because I deem that of paramount importance at the moment and do not think the consideration of it should be embarrassed by extraneous subjects. This will enable you to consider the measures suited to the emergency, irrespective of whether they relate to State or municipal power. The present emergency is statewide and must be dealt with as such by a single State agency which will naturally have local representatives and possibly advisory committees in every locality and will co-operate with the mayors' committees and local organizations and agencies, and I trust will receive their co-operation as well as the hearty co-operation of the public. In the present emergency all must unite for the common purpose of promoting the general welfare.

If anthracite mining is speedily resumed and if we are then favored with maximum production, maximum transportation service and a mild winter, we shall squeeze through without serious discomfort. If we are not thus favored the public may have to submit to some discomforts, but, in any case, I trust that if we make the maximum use of all our resources equitably distributed we shall be able to avert serious distress. At any rate, we can do no more than to create a suitable agency backed by the power and resources of the State and in the present emergency I do not think we can safely do less.

(Signed) NATHAN L. MILLER.
